Auto Service Technology

Automotive technicians are in greater demand than ever before. There are over six million more vehicles on the road today than there were ten years ago, but the number of trained technicians has decreased by over 90,000.

Auto service technology has changed dramatically over the years. Today's technician must be a highly trained and skilled individual. To repair today's vehicles, technicians must be able to interpret thousands of pages of service manuals on computer by roaming extensive online libraries.

GRTS Auto Service Technology program can give you the highly specialized education that automotive shops and dealerships are looking for today.
